

Aadvantage Tent Fittings Inc. acquires the assets of Henry Evers MFG CO.

Aadvantage Tent Fittings, Inc. (ATF) has recently completed a transaction whereby it has acquired the assets of Henry Evers MFG CO. (Evers MFG). As a result of this transaction, the manufacturing equipment and inventory of Evers MFG has been relocated from St. Louis, Missouri and integrated into ATF's Chillicothe, Ohio based plant.

Founded in 1874, Evers MFG is a highly specialized producer of wooden and metal components for tents including upright tent poles, ridge poles, stakes and rope slides among other things. These products are sold through a nationwide dealer network including tent and awning manufacturers, event rental companies and distributors.

ATF is a leading manufacturer and distributor of a broad portfolio of commercial and military tent related products used by tent manufacturers, event rental companies and many branches of the U.S. Government. Founded in 1991, ATF manufactures its core product lines at its Chillicothe, Ohio based plant and remains family owned and operated.

This transaction will increase ATF's core manufacturing capabilities and give its customers access to a dynamic portfolio of unique solutions for tenting applications. According to ATF Executive Officers Ben and Mike Hall "We consider this to be a positive development for our company and customers alike as it brings together a very diverse basket of products and solutions related to commercial, military, primitive and recreational tents. Also a family company, we maintain utmost respect for the Evers family who guided Evers MFG for 139 years and through a multitude of major macroeconomic and geopolitical challenges. It is certainly an honor to have the opportunity to carry on production of select Evers products."
